Roadtec Breaks Ground for New Training Center

Roadtec began construction in June, 2010 on a new 11,500 square foot (1,070 sq.meters) training center. The new facility will have a large auditorium with state-of-the-art projection equipment, a dining facility able to accommodate over 100 people, and separate class rooms for specific courses in the Roadtec training curriculum.

Roadtec holds customer trainings each winter. Owing to the company's growth, the courses had to be held off-site during the 09/10 training season because there was a lack of space in the existing Roadtec building.

The new, two-story complex is scheduled to be completed in late fall of this year in time for the next round of customer training sessions.

Jeff Richmond, Roadtec president said, "Everyone at Roadtec is thrilled about this new facility. We look forward to seeing it through to completion and to welcoming our customers here."
